Remember, Remember,...
Fireworks aren't just in November !

Is your pet scared by fireworks or other loud noises ?
How do you know if your pet is scared of fireworks ?

Dogs will most likely show signs like holding the ears back, panting, drooling, shaking, hiding, barking and even messing in the house.

Cats are better at disguising. They may act withdrawn, hide away, interact less with you, spraying, peeing on objects in the house or overgrooming.

So what can you do to help your pet through this ?

Dogs ideally need a long-term behaviour modification plan which includes desensitisation. This needs to be started once firework season is over (February/March) and if you are interested in that we are happy to help. Short-term you can help them by creating a hiding place where they feel safe and secure. Additionally you can support them with pheromones.
These are chemical signals secreted by animals to communicate with themselves or others. "Adaptil" is a synthetic copy of one of those pheromones which helps to reassure dogs in challenging situations. It comes in plug-in diffusers, collars and sprays and we are running a special with 33% off selected products this month.

Cats like elevated hiding places. Ensure all doors, windows and cat flaps are locked so they can't escape provide them with plenty of extra). You can play relaxing bangs. Have fun toys ready can support them by using copy of a cat specific facial should they try and bolt. Also litter trays ( one per cat plus one music and tv to muffle loud for distraction. Additionally you "Feliway". This is a synthetic pheromone, which prevents and reduces stress. It comes in plug-in diffusers and sprays. We are also running a special on selected "Feliway" products with 33% off those.
